

Your Inner Master and Your Heart's Desire

Advisory! It is imperative that all person's choosing to do this work first complete the 3 months of preparatory work as laid out in the chapter "Occult Anatomy of the Body"!

This work requires the use of the 7 Alchemical Herbal Essences

What is your Heart's desire?

If indeed you had every conceivable thing that you ever wanted provided for you, all your needs meet, what would be that which you created from the love of your heart? What thing could you be and do, that would fill you with the most profound joy and happiness, where fulfillment was achieved simply by doing this thing. What would this be?

You would be amazed how many people I have asked this question too, and so many of these people say, "I do not know". This is sad; because what is really being said is that they have not yet found their reason for being here. They have not found any purpose to life other than the so-called mundane.

The fact that so many just do not know what is their Heart's desire, is testament to how cut off so many of us are from ourselves. If there is such a gulf existing within the mind of people in connection to their presence on earth and the reason for their existence, than is it any wonder that there exist such a chasm between nature and us?

To be natural is to be full of life; it is to be filled with the Holy Spirit, the fructifying principle of manifestation. Yet so many of us view nature as a hostile wild thing, in fact we see nature to be filled with an unnaturalness, that in its present state it is a perversion of the mythological utopia it once had been. Indeed our personal and natural desires are even seen in the same light we use to look upon nature herself.

If that which God creates is ever lasting and unchangeable, if the divine has pronounced all its creation good, I must ask why then do you see it differently? Who has told you that which you see is evil, who has lowered Isis' veil and placed a barrier between man and Divinity? Some will tell you the world is the way it is because of the curse placed on us by God for disobeying him. Indeed the third chapter of Genesis does describe the creation of the type of world many of us have come to see. But what of the sacrificed lamb, whose blood has washed us all clean, and rejoined us with the Divine? If Christ has indeed done what we are taught, then any adherence to the contrary is all our doing. Indeed the way has been shown; all we must do is follow it.

Before you can work at helping to bring fulfillment to others you must first be fulfilled. Before love, health and happiness are shared with others you must discover them within yourself. We are all put here to live in this world and learn from our experiences. Unfortunately many people feel that their existence here is one of drudgery and pain. They see themselves as having to claw out from the world some sort of existence.

This fortunately is the farthest thing from the truth. Divine Providence God has put us all here to enjoy the bounty of its creations. The Divine Mother and Father have put these desires of success, security, health, happiness and love within all of us. Truly, the spirit of abundance prevails. The majesty of the lord is an inexhaustible supply from which you derive all things needed both spiritual and physical. There is no want, which their Divinity cannot fulfill.

The methodology of finding one's heart's desire is a very simple, it relies on the inherent creative abilities that lie within all of us. This inherent creative force has been used by all of us since the day that we were born. We all use it day in and day out. We all have within us all the power and resources that we need for achieving our one aim. We also inherently possess the mastery of those forces to be employed to direct this energy into the fulfillment of our Heart's desire. What only needs to be done by any of us is to become conscious of these facts.

It was said earlier that the creative processes inherent in humans is the same -- but to a lesser degree -- as that used by the Divine Mother and Father to create the universe. It was also said earlier that the universe and all matter are an image held in the consciousness of Divine Providence. The Divine Pair for the most part creates the background on the canvas. We, by our daily habitual thoughts create the scenery and colors. The world we exist in today is indeed created by ourselves for the most part. It is generated from the images we self-produce in our minds and from that which we feed into our minds via radio and TV. If you do not like the life that you are living then you must make the decision to change it. You must decide that you will be, and do something other than what you are experiencing now. Many people will say that this is an impossible feat. After all a person born in the ghetto sees the squalor and destruction that poverty generates day in and day out. All of that misery was there before they arrived on this earth, and will be there after they leave. While this is true to a certain extent, it does not mean that the individual is forever trapped in their present circumstance. It might be argued that the greatest spiritual lesson to be learned from individuals in this predicament, is to free their minds from the bondage of appearance.

If the squalor of ghettos gives a society its greatest shame it also on occasions gives us a glimpse of the triumph of the human spirit. Who among us is not thoroughly impressed when we hear stories of people achieving what we call the American Dream when starting from the harshest indigent circumstances. When we hear how a single mother has put herself through school to earn a Ph.D. while working bone crushing hours in some menial job.

All such persons have one thing in common they know what they want and they see a vision of the final product in their minds eye. This indeed is the very first step in getting what you want. This may sound like an oversimplification of the problem but it is not. The question must be put forward how can you get anywhere or accomplish anything if you do not know what it is that you want.

This section of the book is meant to help you get what you want by the use of simple, practical methods of the Hermetic Science. Know that when you exercise your command over the forces available to the Hermetic Scientist you are not doing so at the expense of another. On the contrary Divine law states that you can be and do whatever your Heart's desire is as long as it is in accord with universal laws and rhythms. In the mind of many persons the thought will fly into consciousness that divine law and rhythms somehow decree that they should not be wealthy, or some other masochistic martyr complex. If this is what you consciously sow, then believe me it is exactly what you will reap.

Some persons say their Heart's desire is to be of service, to this I must reply what type of service? We are all continually in service to the world whether we realize it or not. We do the world and humanity the greatest service by doing what it is that is our passion. Because in the working of such things we share automatically the joy and fulfillment that we derive from doing what it is we love with others. A society is only as free, secure, happy, and healthy, as each of its individual member's feel these qualities manifest within their lives. Know then that the greatest service you can do to humanity is to follow your Heart's desire. Because the love and security that you feel within yourself will radiate to all that you come into contact with, affecting and encouraging them in a way no words could ever hope to.

Some say that their Heart's desire is to seek spiritual illumination or some derivative thereof. This of course is the ultimate goal of all religions, mystics and occultist. We are all here to make manifest and conscious in the minds of all, that matter is spirit. But until we have learned to balance the aspects of our minds and established a center of love and fulfillment within ourselves, such spiritual illumination will never be forthcoming. The mind which does not know itself or have connected with its passion, its desire -- which we have already shown are precipitated from divine impulses -- can never hope to touch or comprehend the sublime truths of spirit.

Probably the most common thing sought after is money. But this is generally a misnomer of want. When pressed further these people do not want money, but rather they want the things that they can buy with money. In this case the individual would be much better off envisioning the final result they desire to have, rather than the intermediate attainment of greenbacks.

Many persons look at this particular phase of the work as the mere setting of goals. To the cursory observer this is so, but to the Hermetic Scientist there is much more going on here than meets the eye. The Hermetic Scientist knows that by getting in touch with, and seeing the ultimate objective firmly in their mind's eye, that he or she has set in motion spiritual forces which will carry out the bidding of their will. It can truly be said that on the astral plane the concentration of light within the center of the mind has caused an aggregation of supremely fine matter to be collected about the center of this light. By repeated practice of manifesting this image in the mind it is given vitality.

The work though does not end here. Getting in touch with and seeing your Heart's desire, while important, is just the beginning of the process. There must be work or action here on the material plane to allow the vision of the mind, and passion of the heart, to become manifest on the earth. In other words it is not just enough to make a blueprint, we must also set about constructing that which we have designed. Never though feel that you are working alone on this project. Indeed the entire universe is behind you and wants you to succeed in your Heart's desire. Because all creation continually praises the majesty of Divinity, and your bringing into fruition the desire sent to you from the Divine Pair is their greatest praise.

I believe the words of the Great French Adept Eliphas Levi (Alphonse Louis Constant) say it best.

“There exist a force in nature which is more powerful than steam, by means of which a single person who can master it, and knows how to direct it, might throw the world into confusion and transform its face. It is diffused throughout infinity; it is substance and motion at one and the same time; it is a fluid and a perpetual vibration. The will of intelligent beings acts directly upon this light, and by means thereof, upon all nature, which is made subject to the modifications of intelligence.”

“ By the direction of this agent we can change the very order of the seasons, produce in the night the phenomena of day, correspond instantaneously from one end of the earth to the other, heal or hurt at a distance, and endow human speech with a universal reverberation and success. To know how to master this agent so as to profit by and direct its currents is to accomplish the Magnum Opus (Great Work), to be master of the world, and the depository of the power of Divinity.”

“Being the instrument of life, this force naturally collects at living centers; it cleaves to the kernel of plants as to the heart of man, but it identifies with the individual life of the existence it animates. We are, in fact, saturated with this light, and continually project it to make room for more. The settlement and polarization of this light about a center produces a living being; it attracts all the matter necessary to perfect and preserve itself.”

“This force has four properties: to dissolve (water element), to consolidate (earth element), to quicken (fire element), and to moderate (air element). These four properties directed by the will of people, can modify all phases of nature.”

It is funny how the human mind takes the simplest things and makes them difficult to understand. Throwing roadblocks of supposed reason always in the path of the searcher for truth. Take for instance the use and control of the force described above. In reality it is a very simple thing, something in fact that we all do everyday. But if you ask many people they will tell you that it would probably take years of practice in monk like solitude to gain mastery over this force. Believe me nothing could farther from the truth. Right now at this very moment you are exerting control over this force. In fact from the day you are born to the day you leave this incarnation and beyond, you will be exerting control over this force. You no more need to learn how to control this force than any human being needs to learn how to breathe or have their heart beat. With every thought, action, deed, and act of life you perform you are shaping and molding this force to conform to your will! If this were not so then no thing you ever thought of would come into fruition. We as human need not learn how to control this force but new ways of directing and using it.

What is essential is for you to tear down the doubt barrier and replace it with faith born of experience. Faith is nothing more than belief in that which all the senses deny the existence and reality of because it is not physically present. It is essential that words like try do not enter into your vocabulary. To try means to fail. To have faith in your self and aim is to know it shall be accomplished. It is not enough to just want a thing; we must act upon our wants to bring them from a thought to a concrete realization. Once again the words of Eliphas Levi:

“Every intention which does not assert itself by deeds is a vain intention, and the speech which expresses it is idle speech. It is action, which proves life and establishes will. Hence it is said in the sacred and symbolical books that men will be judged, not according to their thoughts and their ideas, but according to their works. We must act in order to be...”

“ In order to do a thing, we must believe in the possibility of our doing, and this faith must forthwith be translated into acts. When a child says: “I cannot”, his mother answers “try”. Faith does not even try; it begins with certitude of completing, and it proceeds calmly, as if omnipotence were at its disposal and eternity before it. Dare to formulate your desires, then set out to work at once, and do not cease acting after the same manner and for the same end; what you want shall come to pass, and by you and for you it has indeed already begun”.

Let us remember the law of the 4 pillars of the temple, which are:

KNOWLEDGE: You must know what you want in order to get it.

DARING: Dare to strive and work unerringly towards your goal.

VOLITION: Will that what you want to become a reality.

SILENCE: That, which is spoken of, is like chaff broadcast to the wind. It soon is tossed about hither and thither and becomes impotent.

Expectations. So many times we have convinced ourselves that life is such a bitch that it is hard to expect anything else. Some may even argue that the programming of subconsciousness that will be described in the following pages, to be nothing more than psyching themselves out. Working with the practical aspects of the Hermetic Science is never psyching yourself out. You do not have to lie to your subconscious to get what you want; there are no subtle delusions that must be performed. In order to evoke change in environment, and us there must be a truthful assessment of our present condition. Only then can we acknowledge that truth and act upon it.

When the average person looks around himself he sees a world of hostility, one in which they must claw out a living from the world, where they must fight for their slice of the pie. When you hear of the success another is enjoying does it make you happy, or do you secretly feel that here was another missed opportunity that you just did not avail yourself to? Do you see a world in which all the wealth is in the hands of other persons, with nothing left over for you? Do you see a world of limited opportunity, one in which there is not the twinkle of hope for you to achieve happiness because you believe you have not the means to achieve your Heart's desire? When I was a child I was enthralled with the idea of growing up and becoming a research scientist and explorer. Sometime around my tenth year I got the crazy notion in my head that all the great discoveries in the world had been made. I believed that there were no more unexplored tracts of the world and that there was no more spectacular adventures left to go on. None of this was true of course, but I believed it to be true, and thus it colored my perception of the world and my place in it.

It was said earlier that the subconscious is under the domination of the self-conscious mind of the individual, that indeed the subconscious simply elaborates by deduction any premises presented to it by the conscious mind. In my case since I believed that there were no more adventures left in the world, this is what was produced for my reality. I stopped looking and perceiving possibilities. In a sense I created for myself a type of blindness to the world; a blindness in which the common things among us lost the luster of their sparkle and the awe of the miracle inherent in them.

The Hermetic Scientist should dismiss these and all similar trains of thought. Their mind should always be affirming the love and majesty of the Divine Pair. It should always be affirming the truth that spirit is matter. Our minds should always remember that divine the decree, states that all life is entitled to, universal peace, universal political freedom, universal religious freedom, universal education, universal health, universal prosperity, and universal spiritual unfoldment. Indeed this is the true state of life no matter how the lens of our assumptions and beliefs distort the picture.

What is about to be written may sound like cliché and old hat to some but it is an absolute truth and the starting point for turning around the state of mind that sees limitations set upon it from every direction. If we are to feel wealthy, happy, and secure we must start right from where we are at this present moment. Have you given thanks today for the ability to see the beauty of a green tree, or the red of a rose, yes, even give thanks for the ability to see the decay of the slum that you may be living in. I believe that there is not one person on the earth who would rather go blind than look at decay. So if you have awakened this day with the ability to see give praise and thanks unto the Lord of life whom has bestowed this miracle this blessing upon you.

Indeed have you marveled at the fact that you can taste the food you eat and enjoy it? Even if the food is not that palatable thank the Divine Pair you have the ability to taste, without it you could not enjoy a thing you eat. Even give praise for that morning breath you have, because you know that when you take care of your oral hygiene you will be able to experience the sensual pleasure derived from going from a mouth that taste and smells disgusting to one of freshness and clean. We should all then give thanks for our five senses. For the ability to hear the songs of birds or the blaring of a siren, for the caress of the cool wind upon our cheeks and the smell of dog shit wafting down the street on a hot humid day. While we may call some of these things pleasant and other not so pleasant they none-the-less create within us a symphony of emotions, thoughts and feelings in short we experience life with every impact on our 5 senses.

There is a saying that I have heard Oprah Winfrey use many times, that goes something like this; “If you always concentrate on what you do not have you will never have enough”. Looking at this statement in the light of what was written in the chapter concerning the subconscious, it will be blatantly clear why persons with this attitude never feel they have enough to do what they want. There is always just one more piece of equipment needed before they can begin, or they need a million dollars in the bank before they will even think of formulating what it is that they want. As this is the dominant thought in their daily lives their subconscious sets to work immediately always making sure that they never see enough bounty in the cornucopia we call the earth. If on the other hand these individuals would see themselves blessed with the magnificence of life, just based on the immense wealth the Divine Pair has placed here for us all in their creations, they would see themselves overflowing with abundance, happiness and security. This of course would translate to a totally different line of deductive reasoning in subconsciousness and the interconnected miracles of life would shine brighter and brighter in their lives.

It all boils down to how we see our environment and ourselves in our heads. Visualization is the key to the entire control of subconsciousness because subconsciousness responds best to suggestion planted via mental pictures. In fact there is not a thing that we seek to accomplish, that we want to be or do, that is not first seen in the mind. The key to correctly using visualization to control subconsciousness is to see these images as present realities. If it is a car that you want you must see it in your minds eye first. If it is a boat or a house you must first see it and use it in your mind. This is called creating a pattern for the subconscious to use in manifesting that which you desire. The more plastic, colorful, and 3D the image, the quicker will its materialization be, than if flat black and white images are used. Indeed we must imbue or animate the images in our minds with vitality before we can ever hope to have them manifest on this plane of matter. In order to have an image we must know though what it is that we want we must have contacted our Heart's desire.

You are about to be introduced to a simple yet explosive technique used over the millennia by adepts, royalty, high priest and priestesses of all lands. Do not allow its simplicity to belie the profundity of the extraordinary power you are about to unleash and use. I welcome you to the dawning gold of your new world!
